Explore a career in business

SIAS Business programs hold information nights

Monday, April 6, 2009 – Prospective students will learn at three upcoming information sessions why SIAS Business programs offer a solid return on investment.

During April, SIAS is hosting three Business Information Nights that will cover topics including student life, services available for students, the range of Business programs and the careers available for graduates. Program heads, instructors, current students and past graduates will be available to answer questions and give tours.

“This is a great opportunity for prospective students and parents to explore their options for a career in business,” says Dan MacKay, dean of Business and Entrepreneurial Studies. “Students in SIAS Business programs enjoy short programs, small class sizes, affordable tuition and most important – a high grad employment rate. Many of our students land jobs in their field before graduation.”

Interested students will have the option to apply to the program of their choice, and most will be able to start as soon as the fall.

The following programs have seats available for fall 2009:

- Business Certificate – the first step toward a two-year SIAS Business diploma in one of the following areas:
 - Business Accountancy
 - Business Administration
 - Business Financial Services
 - Business Human Resources
 - Business Marketing
- Business Information Systems
- Entrepreneurship and Small Business
- Office Education

The three SIAST Business Information Nights are on:
